Mr. Asensio:

I am in receipt of your most recent voicemail requesting yet again that I call you. Your initial email last week grossly misrepresented a prior conversation we had; consequently, as I previously informed you, we will only communicate with you in writing going forward. I have also informed you via email that we will only communicate with you concerning procedural issues relating to the pending case against you. In that regard, you have declined our offer of an extension on the time for you to answer the complaint, and we intend to move for a default judgment.

Please do not call my firm or client again.

Thank you.
