Dear Josh,

Thank you for getting back to me. Here are a few considerations:

1. We are approaching this differently because several of our journalists have received credible threats, private information leaks and harassment. We are trying to protect the identity of those involved, including myself.
2. We are interested in seeing if companies who support these individuals financially will hold them accountable.

Thank you for the information about AT&T. They are a brand that has worked with Asterios in the past. We are reaching out to companies who support these individuals financially, and AT&T or its subsidiaries has contracted work with CMG/IGC. Apologies if Weber-Shandwick was not directly involved. If you would be willing to provide a current list of campaigns and companies Asterios has worked with, we'd love to reach out to them for comment.

If you are unwilling to give a statement due to the relative anonymity of this piece, that is understandable, as I am not just a journalist, but an activist. My goal is to see if companies will hold them accountable once they know about the illicit activities of their employees. To be clear, Asterios Kokkinos works with a writer named Dax Herrera who goes by the pseudonym, "Dick Masterson" of the website "Men Are Better Than Women:" <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/>

There are countless articles about rape on the website. Here are some quotes:

"A guy who fucks a drunk girl who passed out in his bed isn't a rapist, he's just a dick. Get over it."

From: <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/rape/>

"All date rape victims and drug rape victims are lying whores."

From: "Date rape is a myth" - <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/date-rape-is-a-myth/>

"Being a victim of 'date rape' is like being a victim of getting a flat tire when you drive off a cliff. You did it, it's your fault, you're lying about how it happened"

From: <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/date-rape-is-a-myth/>

"If women really hate rape so much, then why is the first argument they always haphazardly spit out of their mouths: 'Without women, none of you men would even be here!' ... Without rape, none of you twits would be here either."

From: <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/all-women-are-worse-than-rapists/>

"Women are whores and they know they're whores. And sexual harassment lawsuits are the proof! Getting hit on or having your ass grabbed is not a big deal."

From: <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/sexual-harassment-deal-with-it/>

Even if you are reluctant to give a statement, I implore you to Google Asterios Kokkinos and Dick Masterson to see what your employee is up to. You should be aware of the misogynistic nature of who you are employing. 5 minutes of Googling will yield this information: <https://twitter.com/dickmasterson/status/837102007102025728>

Dear Heather,

As stated in my original email, we take these matters very seriously.

I would be happy to set up a time to speak with you. Prior to doing that, you'll need to provide me with your full contact details and the name of your editor at Condé Nast. The number you've provided below goes to the Condé Nast switchboard and there is no way to reach you with just a first name and last initial. As a professional journalist, I'm sure you understand that we need to verify the identity of any reporter we speak with on the record.

I also wanted to let you know that contrary to what you wrote in your original email, AT&T is not an active or former client of ours.

Best regards,

Josh

Dear Joshua,

Thank you for getting back to me. I'm on assignment in London until the 9th, and can set something up when I return. Until then, I'd be happy to take a statement with regards to online bullying and harassment if you are able to provide any.

Thank you,

Heather S

Dear WeberShandwick staff & AT&T:

CC'ing AT&T on this because you've worked with Weber Shandwick for online/print before.

My name is Heather, I'm a freelance journalist writing on behalf of the Conde Nast Media Group whose work has appeared in Wired, Jezebel, The Mercury News, Vice News, etc. In light of Milo Yiannopoulos scandal, we're doing a piece about online trolls, bullying and harassment. One of your writers, Asterios Kokkinos, is taking part in an online harassment and bullying campaign targeting individuals.

We were informed by a women's comedy group in Los Angeles that he records some of his segments after hours at Weber Shandwick, and works with a person named "Dick Masterson" who runs a website titled "Men Are Better Than Women" and has written misogynistic statements such as this:

From: <http://www.menarebetterthanwomen.com/rape/>

These two collaborate frequently and they seem to be targeting women online for harassment, as well as former colleagues:

<https://twitter.com/dickmasterson/status/832500979002068992>

<https://twitter.com/dickmasterson/status/796268286153363457>

Asterios uses alt-right phraseology like "cuck" and released an entire album of "cuck" songs to harass, bully and spite people online:

<https://twitter.com/asterios/status/834419105725870080>

[redacted] asterioskokkinos (@asterioskokkinos) 12/14/2017 12:00 PM
Fuck off, cuck!

[redacted] asterioskokkinos (@asterioskokkinos) 12/14/2017 12:00 PM
That sentence is grammatically incorrect, cuck!

I'd like to ask a few questions:

1. Are you aware of your employees/contractors taking part in online harassment campaigns such as this?
2. If you were aware of your employees/contractors online bullying, to what extent?
3. Do you condone company property being used to create this content?

We may also be reaching out to the UN Women's group, Swanson Foods, Tums, Disney and others for a statement. If you have any further information, please let us know.

Thank you,

Heather S
