He went back and concierge denied access, so he served the concierge by leaving it on the concierge's desk, because concierge walked away from him after refusing to let him up to the apartment.

So even after 5 attempts and the required nail and mail last night, which satisfies CPLR 308(4), you want him to go back to NY address and try again, and if he is denied access, serve the concierge? The concierge didn't refuse, but said he likely would if he went back because he did allow him to go up and nail and mail to complete his service.

Yes please -- we should attempt to serve Asensio in NY and NJ today as Steve advised below. If the NY concierge continues to refuse, let's serve the concierge today.

Also, just to follow up on our call, it's fine to use the same company for both the NY and NJ addresses if the company has represented that they can handle it. Let us know if that changes though, and we can deal accordingly.

Thank you,
 Skye

Sorry guys, process server just informed me that he nailed and mailed yesterday after his latest attempt at the NY address because the concierge indicated to him that he was not going to keep letting him up to the apartment. He said in his experience that will satisfy due diligence. So how do you want to proceed? Do you want him to go back and served the concierge, and then do the NJ attempts as discussed?
